

confidentiality

Our Support Group aims to be a place where people can share in a safe and confidential environment, which means that anyone who attends the group (including volunteers) should not discuss things that are said within the group to anyone outside it.

However, there are times when confidentiality should be broken.

These are:

if someone admits to having committed a serious criminal offence

if there is a danger that someone else might be harmed

if there is a danger that someone will harm her/himself

For each of the above the appropriate action needs to be taken.
